U.S. BEAN EXPORTS CONTINUE

CURRENT SERIAL RECORD

TO FLUCTUATE

U.S. commercial exports of dry edible beans dropped to 133,406 metric tons for the 1964-65 marketing year, 25 percent below the previous year's record high of 177,000 tons. This level, although 4 percent below the 1955-59 average, nevertheless was far above 1960-61 and 1961-62 figures.

Since the early 1960's, exports have fluctuated between wide extremes. Near the decade's beginning, Cuba and Mexico -- then two of the world's largest bean importers -- reduced buying in the United States to negligible quantities. Total exports dropped from a 1955-59 average of 139,000 tons to approximately 80,000 tons in 1960-62.

Then, in 1963, an unusually large crop of white beans in the United States coincided with a sharp decline of white beans available for export from Eastern Europe to Western Europe, together with some shift of Cuban demands to Eastern Europe. Coupled with favorable U.S. prices for 1963 crop beans, this combination of circumstances caused a major shift in U.S. exports from colored beans to meet Cuban and Mexican demand, to white beans preferred in Europe.

As a consequence, U.S. exports soared from 80,000 tons in 1960-62 to 146,000 and 177,000 tons in 1962-63 and 1963-64, respectively. European importers added to stocks, importing 116,000 tons in 1963-64 compared with 80,000 the year before.

Then came the 1964 crop, when U.S. production of white navy beans and great northern beans dropped to 371,000 tons compared with 447,000 in 1963. Prices rose. Between September 1964 and February 1965, navy bean prices were higher in a range between 50 and 90 cents per hundredweight a year earlier. Great northern prices ranged from 35 cents to $1.00 per hundredweight higher.

Europeans undoubtedly retaining stocks purchased from the abundant 1963 crop were slow to buy. As a result, U.S. exports to Europe dropped from 116,000 tons in 1963-64 to 76,000 in 1964-65.

U.S. exports to Latin America, also, were sharply curtailed. Mexico, that had never quite ceased buying U.S. beans and imported 13,000 tons in 1963-64, produced a near-record crop in 1964, and therefore imported from the United States only about 3,000 tons.

Largely because of unsettled conditions in the Dominican Republic, that country dropped bean imports from the United States to 5,400 tons in 1964-65 as compared with 9,300 the year before. Prospects are for less white bean exports in 1965-66 than last year, because of severe reductions in U.S. production in 1965.

Of the classes of U.S. beans exported in 1964-65, navy's and great northern constituted the bulk. These also suffered the most severe drops, great northern especially. There was 17,200 tons less northern exported in 1964-65 than in 1963-64, and 17,600 tons less navy's. Of the various classes exported, navy's dropped 25 percent from 1963-64, northern and pintos 52 percent each, and red kidneys 21 percent. These four classes constituted 80 percent of total U.S. dry beans exports in 1964-65.
